City Council Seeks Last Round Of Comments on Elections

by Eli Flam

Greenbelt City Councilmembers, at a regular meeting Monday, April 13, scheduled a final round of three hearings before “indicating our preferences for action” on fairness issues raised by the NAACP and ACLU concerning the voting process in council elections. The hearings – all at 7 p.m. – will be held on Tuesday, April 28 at Springhill Lake Recreation Center; Wednesday, April 29 at Greenbelt Community Center; and Thursday, May 7 at Windsor Green.

A statement read by Mayor Judith Davis said the “brief public hearings “ are only to get comments about two proposed actions: 1) increasing council size from 5 to 7 and moving the election date to an even numbered year and 2) increasing council size from 5 to 7 but making no change at this time to the election year cycle.

Councilmembers then plan to discuss their views at a May 26 meeting. They anticipate taking action on any agreed-upon changes at a meeting June 8. This schedule should provide enough time to meet deadlines for the election November 3.

Proclamations

In earlier action, councilmembers proclaimed Saturday, April 25 both as Arbor Day and Earth Day and May 17 through 23 as Public Works Week. They also called attention to the Public Works open house and ribbon cutting April 25 at its new facility off Crescent Road and Greenbelt’s Celebration of Spring on Saturday, April 18 at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

In separate briefings:

Chris Wilson of the Prince George’s County Planning Department of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission spoke about 12 historic preservation goals and pending action to amend the county’s 1992 Historic Sites and Districts Plan.

Public Information Coordinator Beverly Palau showed how the city, via video streaming, is now offering council meetings and other programming live and on demand on the city website.

At the request of Councilmember Rodney Roberts, action on approving the minutes of executive sessions March 18 and April 7 was put off until next week.

New Restaurant

Councilmembers, while taking no official position on the matter, reacted positively to a presentation about a new restaurant – William’s American Bistro – that hopes to open by late June in the former Bennigan’s in

by Megan Gustafson

Entomology expert and a role model for up and coming young women, Beth Norden, finds Greenbelt is a safe haven.

It is in Greenbelt that, she says, she can “recharge her batteries” – an important thing for a woman who has overcome dyslexia, blazed trails in entomology, traveled the world, researched in Sri Lanka as a Fulbright Scholar, survived dengue hemorrhagic fever and successfully sued the Smithsonian Institution.

Born in Milwaukee, Norden struggled with dyslexia and didn’t read until she was in the sixth grade. Her first grade teacher effectively told her she wasn’t very smart and that was part of what gave her a “certain motivation” to pursue the highest levels of education, she said.

Move to Maryland

Fascinated by insects as a child, Norden would collect different insect species in a shoebox. She was intrigued by the vast varieties of insects – there are more insects than any other life forms, she said.

After moving to Maryland with her family when she was in high school, Norden went on to Towson State University where she graduated summa cum laude

Council Reviews Public Safety Budget; Police Pay Up 6 Percent

by Thomas X. White

The second budget worksession of the Greenbelt City Council was held on Wednesday, April 1 in the Multi-purpose Room of the Greenbelt Community Center. It was devoted to the Public Safety portion of the proposed Fiscal Year 2010 city budget, which includes funding for a full service police department and the city’s annual contributions to the three volunteer fire and rescue departments that provide services for the residents of Greenbelt.

Although not related to the FY10 budget, council was also asked to review proposed recommendations for the Fiscal Year 2009-authorized purchase of replacements for seven police vehicles. With council approval, the recommended vehicles would be purchased by the end of the current fiscal year.

All five members of council and the city manager and his assistant were present. Also participating were Police Chief James Craze and several of the department’s senior officers as well as Chief Brian Rudy and Kenneth Stair of the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department & Rescue Squad (GVFD&RS).

The Police Department, with an overall outlay of over $10 million and 69 full time personnel, is the city’s largest departmental operation. Budgeted funds provide for a full-service police department with around-the-clock patrol in all Greenbelt neighborhoods, K-9 patrol, communications support, criminal investigation, narcotics investigation, crime prevention, traffic enforcement and two school resource officers for Eleanor Roosevelt High School, Greenbelt Middle School and the elementary schools within the city.

Although related to public safety, the city’s animal control program and parking enforcement are covered in the budget for the Planning & Community Development Department.

Because Greenbelt taxpayers spend a large amount of money for a full-service department and do not rely on the county for police services, they pay a lower tax rate to Prince George’s County under the Municipal Tax Differential rebate. Among city departments the Public Safety budget shows the largest single increase for FY10. This is due to police salary increases agreed to by council in its collective bargaining agreement (CBA) with the Greenbelt Fraternal Order of Police Lodge. The CBA calls for a 6 percent increase in pay scale and performance pay for police officers.

Fire & Rescue Budget

For some time the City of Greenbelt has provided an annual grant to the GVFD&RS that is primarily used to assist the company with replacement costs of their fire and rescue squad vehicles. Last year council increased the annual grant to $88,000 and the proposed FY10

Greenbelt’s Social Services Get Kudos from Council

by Virginia Beauchamp

Budget hearings are pretty serious occasions. Speakers representing city departments typically describe what their unit has accomplished over the past year and go on then to suggest ways to expand the mission or range of worthwhile programs.

This was indeed the format of the Greenbelt City Council budget worksession on Monday, April 6 for the Department of Social Services. What was unusual, however, was the meeting’s ending.

After Greenbelt CARES Director Dr. Liz Park and Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) Coordinator Christal Batey had completed their presentations and the evening’s work was done, the five councilmembers showed their appreciation not only with the usual word of thanks for what had been accomplished but also with an enthusiastic clap of hands.

What became clear in the course of the evening was how vital is the work of this component of the city’s mission in protecting and supporting the most fragile and needy among the individuals and groups within its borders. For example, counselors met with Eleanor Roosevelt High School students in three different eight-week discussion groups, focusing on how to make decisions and develop anger management skills.

Letters to the Editor

Thanks, Warning

My family and I appreciated so much all the calls, cards, prayers and other kindnesses shown to us during the months my son Karl McFarland was undergoing surgeries for two separate brain aneurysms. We are very thankful that he's now recuperating at his home in Cheverly and looking forward to going back to work in the near future.

I'd like to use this forum to publicize some medical information: If ever persons close to you should suffer a headache, "the worst one they ever had," accompanied by nausea, get them to an emergency room immediately. These are the symptoms of a ruptured aneurysm in the brain. Quick action could save a life.

Kathleen McFarland

THANKS

We would like to thank the City of Greenbelt and the American Legion for hosting the evening fundraising event for us on Saturday, April 4. We want to also send out a special thanks to Barry and Heather Byers, Bob and Dayna Musterman and our lady friends – Kim, Pam and Tracy for their help during the event. We would like to pass on a very big thank you to all of our family and friends who came out to support us during this difficult time. It meant more than you know to us and our family to have all of you there for your love and support.

Kim and Jerry Potts

Try Adding Seats

Like many Greenbelters eager to see greater participation in our city elections, I emphatically support the proposal to expand the number of at-large seats on [Greenbelt City] Council from five to seven. The biggest immediate obstacle to challengers gaining a seat on council is the popularity of incumbents and the advantages they naturally hold. By adding two seats to the body, Greenbelt voters can show their eagerness to include new voices without penalizing existing councilmembers who have served the community well for many years.

This simple, concrete step will benefit us all and may result in an able African American resident winning a seat sooner rather than later – a goal many share with the NAACP and the ACLU.

However, I must also agree with David Lange's astute testimony at a recent council meeting that the proposal to shift council elections to run on even years (alongside state and national contests) will do nothing to advance this goal. Worse, such a profound alteration of Greenbelt's election process would have worrisome impacts on our local politics – unintended and irreversible impacts.

Specifically, council candidates would need to raise far more money than ever before to be heard above the electoral din; slates and special interests from outside the city would exert much greater influence on our local contest. Sadly, even a cursory familiarity with county politics reminds us all how prevalent cronyism, corruption and backroom dealings can become. Indeed, there is an FBI investigation underway that has resulted in search warrants naming past and current county officials involved in Greenbelt West development, to take one uncomfortably close example. Why would we undertake an electoral reform that would invite this sort of trouble onto our own council?

The politics of Greenbelt have been long characterized by high ideals, cooperation and community service. Expanding our council to seven members would open that tradition to new faces at an important time but shifting balloting to the even-year could permanently damage the integrity and transparency of our politics, leaving them less local than before. More measured reforms, like adding seats, should be tried first.

Reel & Meal Film Is "Scarred Lands"

The next Reel & Meal film to be shown at the New Deal Café on Monday, April 20 at 7 p.m. will be the documentary "Scarred Lands Wounded Lives: the Environmental Footprint of War." The Reel and Meal at the New Deal is a monthly film series that explores environmental and social justice issues and is sponsored by nine Greenbelt community organizations. There is no charge for admission to the film. At 6:30 p.m. an optional vegan buffet meal is available for purchase.

The film relates that war entails actions that pollute land, air and water, destroy biodiversity and drain natural resources while the environmental damage by war and preparation for war is routinely underestimated, under-reported, even ignored. If people cannot eliminate war, they can at least require a fuller accounting of war's costs and consequences and demand that destructive forces used leave a lighter footprint on this highly vulnerable planet.

The film premiered at the 2008 DC Environmental Film Festival. The filmmakers, Alice T. Day and Lincoln H. Day, will talk about their lives and the making of the film as well as leading a discussion after the movie.

Frankenstein Is Café April 24 Fundraiser

Frankenstein, as channeled by Thomas Edison and Japanese composer Yukiko Nishimura, comes to the New Deal Café in Roosevelt Center on Friday, April 24. In 1912 Thomas Edison produced the first horror movie, a silent movie of Frankenstein. The Covington String Quartet commissioned contemporary composer Nishimura to write music to accompany the film; they will be playing the work as the movie is shown as part of their upcoming concert at the Café.
The Covington String Quartet, established in 2001, consists of Greenbelter Greg Pinney, violin; Luke Wedge, violin; Will Hurd, viola; and Frank McKinster, cello. The Quartet is known for challenging audiences with classical as well as contemporary music, with a focus on the great masters of the 18th and 19th centuries. They will play Bartok and Haydn. Tim Page described them in The Washington Post as a “smoothly blended ensemble” with a “surfeit of that curious intangible called charm.”
The concert, starting at 8 p.m., is a benefit performance for the Friends of New Deal Café Arts. A donation will be solicited.

Choral Society Holds Dinner, Silent Auction

She will also introduce some suggestions for nutrient-dense foods which can benefit both the human body and the planet.
This event, which will run from 7 to 8 p.m., is part of the continuing Shop Healthy Series at the Co-op. Attendance is free and open to the public.

An Everyday Miracle on Easter

by Doug Love

When two trees fall in an urban forest, do they make a noise? Apparently they do, as residents of Plateau Place found out at 11:30 Sunday morning.

A sharp crack, followed by another sharp crack, then followed by the crack of falling trees got my attention. It seemed to come from the parking lot between 1 Court Plateau Place and 57 Court Ridge. When I got there a few minutes later, I found two trees lying in the parking lot, just a few feet from Valerie's car. Nothing was hurt except a fence – just another of those everyday miracles reported around the region this Easter Sunday.

A closer examination showed that the roots of both trees were rotted away. The trunks below ground were black, as if burned. And the holes they came out of were immediately full of water. Neighbors reported drainage problems, even right over a drain from the street. It seems that the oak in the back yard of a 59 Court unit had intertwined its branches with a red maple behind 57 Court and they pulled each other down. Bill Orleans found that the wood at the base of these trees was light and "punk," rotten and not able to support their weight.

When I came by Monday afternoon, a chipper crew was already disposing of the downed trees.

Condolences to Carl Zoellner of Plateau Place and his siblings in Utah on the death of their mother, Audrey Zoellner Stewart of Orem, Utah, on March 30, 2009. She was the former wife of the late Marshall "Bud" Zoellner, Greenbelt pioneer and police officer.

Congratulations to:

- The ERHS student athletes who were selected for The Washington Post spring All-Met teams.
- Francis Conley Jennings who was born on February 12, 2009, in Raleigh, N.C. His mother, Katie Jennings, is a former Greenbelt resident who still has many ties to Greenbelt. Francis is welcomed by Greenbelt residents, Great Aunt Betty Money, cousins Joseph Jennings, Charlie and Rachael Roland and many other Greenbelt friends.

UM Panel Discusses "Green" Concerts

Gildenhorn Recital Hall of the Clarice Smith Center for the Performing Arts will be the site for a creative dialogue entitled "Living in our Landscape" on Wednesday, April 22 at 7 p.m. How are artists going green? Whether using their art as a means of environmental activism, "greening" the concert tour industry or using their celebrity to inform and inspire their audiences and fan base, what are the roles and responsibilities of artists when it comes to environmental activism?

Ecologist Andrew Baldwin moderates a panel with country music star Kathy Mattea, Arrian Zelski from the sustainability conscious dub/reggae band Dub-conscious and Brian Allenby from Reverb, a nonprofit that has helped green over 50 concerts and 900 events. This special Earth Day 2009 conversation will explore the many ways in which artists are addressing the environmental crisis. This event is free.

Bahá'í Teachings: Why did God create us?
God is the Creator of all things. He has made the heavens and earth, the animals and the human being. The reason behind our creation, we are told by Bahá'u'lláh, is love. He said: "O Son of Man! I loved thy creation, hence I created thee. Wherefore, do thou love Me, that I may name thy name and fill thy soul with the spirit of life."

Crime Incidents Up
By 8% in 2008

Greenbelt Police Chief James Craze provided the Greenbelt City Council with an overview on recent crime statistics for Greenbelt at the April 1 budget worksession. Based on the latest available statistics (2008), so-called Part I crimes in Greenbelt increased 8 percent in 2008, from 1,363 reported incidents in 2007 to 1,475. Part I crimes are defined as murder, rape, robbery, assault, theft and auto theft. According to Craze, 2007 was the end of a 10-year trend downward for the serious crime statistics; in 2008 it trended up. These types of offenses accounted for 15 percent of all crime in Maryland and in Prince George’s County.

For Greenbelt the total was 4 percent, indicating that Greenbelt falls in line with regional and statewide violent crime trends. Again, for Greenbelt, robbery is the most prevalent violent crime problem, having risen a total of 69 percent over a five year period.

During 2008 there were 152 reported robbery offenses accounting for 71 percent of all violent crime and 10 percent of the Part I crime index. Sixty-three percent (96) of the robberies occurred in Greenbelt West, 21 percent (32) in Greenbelt East and 16 percent (24) in Greenbelt Center.

Less serious crimes against property reported during 2008 were nearly five times greater (1,262) than the number of violent crimes and represented 86 percent of the total crime index. Across the geographic areas of Greenbelt, 53 percent of the reported crime incidents (788) occurred in Greenbelt West. Greenbelt East experienced 29 percent (434) and Greenbelt Center had 17 percent (253).

Overall the department responded to 41,524 calls for service in 2008, a 4 percent increase. Police reports increased by 6 percent to 11,139 and adult arrests increased 19 percent to 753. Juvenile arrests totaled 217, a 12 percent increase.

Greenbelt officers arrested 169 motorists for impaired driving offenses, an unusually high number for an agency this size. The city’s Red Light Camera program generated 4,023 citations in 2008, a 1 percent decrease from the prior year. Interestingly most red light camera violations occurred on a Wednesday (16 percent); the most frequently violated location was northbound Kenilworth Avenue at Southbound I-95.

Another statistic provided in answer to a question from council was that off-duty Greenbelt officers responded to 1,628 incidents in 2008, an increase of 53 from the previous year.

budget maintains that level for next year.

For the first time in FY09 council also approved grants of $5,000 each to the Berwyn Heights Fire Department and the West Lanham Hills Fire Department. That level is also maintained for next year. These two departments provide first response calls in Greenbelt West and East.

GVFD & RS Chief Brian Rudy was on hand to brief council on the financial status of the company and its relations with the Prince George’s County Fire Department. Rudy noted that the purchase price for a new fire truck was approaching $450,000 and that the city’s grant funding is critical in purchasing new equipment. The chief also noted that the company earned $90,000 for the recent sale of a retired pumper to a fire department in Pennsylvania.

Rudy also reported that the liaison has improved between the new Prince George’s County Fire Chief and the volunteer departments. The county, in an effort to reduce overtime for its paid employees assigned to the volunteer companies, has asked the various volunteer units to cover the 3 to 5 p.m. period one day a week without a paid county employee. Rudy said that the GVFD&RS will be able to comply but noted that it would give sufficient notice to the county if local coverage was a problem for a particular day.

He also provided a status report on implementation of the new system for charging clients (patients) for EMS services and transportation.

The GFD&RS officials noted they had just received a first report on the system for the month of February and expressed some concern with the high percentage of county-assigned costs for “consultant fees.” The volunteer companies are discussing that situation with the new fire chief.

Issues for FY10

The police department is slated to seek recertification of its original Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies, Inc. (CALEA) certification in 2006. The review by CALEA will include an on-site review in June. If successful, the award will be given at the fall 2009 CALEA conference in Salt Lake City.

In order to maintain the prestigious certification, the department must successfully prove that it continuously follows the rigorous standard set forth by the commission. The chief gave kudos to Sergeants Carl Schinner and James Parker for coordination of the department’s recertification efforts.

Related to the CALEA certification is a requirement for Computer Aided Dispatching (CAD) capability. Since the 2006 certification, the city has worked with the City of Hyattsville and the University of Maryland to select a suitable vendor to develop a system that could be utilized by all three departments.

The implementation of a CAD system was listed as a FY09 management objective to be implemented in FY10. Related to the CALEA objective is completion of a Records Management System in the near future and development of a fully interoperable radio system within the National Capital Region. While the county would provide the infrastructure for such a radio system each municipal department must upgrade its own radio communications equipment.

For FY10 and beyond, Craze provided council with a four-year projection for potential retirements of long-tenured officers. He noted that potential retirements within the next five years represent a total of 531 combined years of public safety experience that would be lost. These losses would include four senior command positions and 19 senior rank and file positions including a variety of specialties.

Vehicle Replacements

Possible vehicle replacements were placed on the agenda to inform council of the department’s thinking regarding expected purchase of seven replacement police vehicles in FY09. The department recommends purchase of four Chevrolet Impala police patrol vehicles and three Chevrolet Tahoe police patrol vehicles plus K-9-related equipment for two of the Tahoe vehicles. The total cost under a bid from Criswell Chevrolet awarded to the State of Maryland totals $190,955.

The choice of the Impala sedan is a departure from previous preferences for the Ford Crown Victoria police vehicle. Craze reported that the Impala is rated highly by other departments and would have a better fuel efficiency record.

The choice of the Tahoe is based on the department’s preference for a vehicle better suited for K-9 equipment. The third Tahoe would be slated for use by the traffic unit, being better suited for handling the specialized equipment for training or traffic operations.

Council was also provided with a comprehensive vehicle mileage summary for the entire fleet of 68 Greenbelt Police department vehicles, nearly 35 percent of which exceed 80,000 miles. The FY10 proposed budget includes a recommendation for replacement of eight police vehicles.

with a degree in environmental education.

While there, she met her husband of 36 years, Arnold “Butch” Norden, in a botany class. On their first date they collected ferns. It was love at first sight and by their second date – though she said neither of them was particularly interested in marriage or family at the time – they were engaged.

There they were, sitting on a bench under a tree and “the next thing I know he asked me to marry him,” Norden recalled, smiling.

She and her husband, who works for the Department of Natural Resources, share a love of biology and nature; they were the first husband and wife members of the Washington Biologists Field Club, she said.

After earning a master’s in biology at Towson State, Norden began Ph.D. work in entomology at the University of Maryland, earning the distinction in 1985.

While completing her doctorate, she became a mom to her daughter Heather, now 28, and her son John, 24.

Career and Family

Norden strove to balance her career aspirations and love of science with her family life, wanting to show that “women can make contributions to the world – like science – and still be good mothers,” she said.

Throughout her career, Norden has made a number of discoveries – five species and two genera of hymenoptera insects have been named for her.

She has published several children’s books about insects. Remembering her own struggle as a child with reading, her children’s books are full of vivid, magnified pictures of insects, some of which are pop-ups.

Illness

So it was quite a blow when Norden contracted dengue hemorrhagic fever in 2000 while conducting research in Brazil for the Smithsonian, where she worked as an entomologist for more than 20 years.

Fighting the disease brought her to the brink of death. During the ordeal, she found tremendous support in the Greenbelt community. Her neighbor, she said, brought her the newspaper every day and continues to do so, even though she has recovered.

“That’s the kind of community this is,” Norden said. “I’m treated like I’m a member of a big family.”

Since recovering from dengue, Norden works part-time at Greenbelt Community Church as an administrative assistant. She has volunteered in scientific research projects – for the USDA and the Archbold Biological Station in Florida.

“Beth is a devoted scientist who takes enormous pleasure in doing her scientific work, even on a volunteer basis,” said Vickie Fang, the attorney who represented Norden in her lawsuit against the Smithsonian.

Norden’s yard, Fang said, is clearly that of a biologist’s – home to various types of plants and animals with numerous bird feeders hanging from trees.

“She takes an interest and great joy in her surroundings, both as a biologist and as a member of her community,” Fang said.

Norden said she hopes to be a “role model for up and coming young women,” in the community of Greenbelt, which she said is “extremely special.”

“Our strength here in Greenbelt is the people,” she said.

Robberies

April 5, 9 p.m., 9100 block Springhill Lane, a man was approached by three men, one armed with a handgun. A robbery was announced and after the man gave the suspects his wallet he was punched and kicked. The suspects may have fled the scene in a vehicle described as a black sports car. The victim was transported to a hospital for treatment.

April 6, 11:51 p.m., 5900 block Cherrywood Terrace, a person was approached by two men, one armed with a handgun. A robbery was announced; after taking a cell phone and money the men fled the scene in a vehicle described as a gray medium-sized passenger car. Special NASA Kids’ Program on Sunday

NASA’s Goddard Space Flight Center is inviting elementary school students and their families to the Sunday Experiment Program at the Visitor Center on Sunday, April 19 from 1 to 3 p.m. for an afternoon of eye-opening, hands-on activities exploring the Earth’s home, the universe.

This month students will explore the Visitor Center with a solar system scavenger hunt that is designed to help them grasp the relative distances between the planets in the solar system. Students will discover the abundances of the most common elements in the universe by using everyday materials and creating their own “Exo-Planets,” while keeping in mind what a planet needs to survive. The Visitor Center’s Science on a Sphere presentation will also provide insight into how the universe works.

The Sunday Experiment is held the third Sunday of each month from September through May to feature activities showcasing NASA’s world-renowned science and engineering research and technological developments. It is a program “where children and adults alike can discover the excitement of Goddard through fun and easy hands-on activities,” said program founder Emilie Drobnos. “You get to act like scientists and engineers while building all types of little rockets and hover-crafts, designing your own planets and stars and even trying your hand at being part of the manned spaced program. At the Sunday Experiment we energize the public about NASA and the science we do here and we aren’t afraid to get our hands dirty in the process!”

In addition to celebrating all things science, technology, engineering and mathematics, the program celebrates major science missions managed by Goddard that are set to launch in 2009 and 2010.

More information is available at the Goddard Visitor Center webpage at <http://www.nasa.gov/centers/goddard/visitor/events/index.html>.

Mobiles and Kites Arts Drop-In

On Sunday, April 26 from 2 to 4 p.m. instructor Aaron Springer will lead a creative free-form arts afternoon where children and parents – ideal for children ages 3 to 8 – will make mobiles and kites for springtime. All children must be accompanied by an adult. The event will be held at the Old Parish House, 4711 Knox Road (corner of Knox and Dartmouth) in College Park.

For more information call 301-927-3013 or email info@cpae.org.

Greek Dancing Offered Nearby

Greek circle dancing for adults and older kids, plus Greek snacks at a reception afterward, will be available free of charge on Friday, April 24 at 7:30 p.m. at the Old Parish House, 4711 Knox Road (corner of Knox and Dartmouth) in College Park.

For details call 301-927-3013 or email info@cpae.org.

Beltway Plaza. Manager David Lynch spoke about “a different demeanor,” with an emphasis on organic elements; attorney Robert Kim said it will be “a nice, sit-down restaurant.”

In response to a complaint about a parking ticket for a rented truck aired by Keith Bare of 39-K Ridge Road at council’s March 23 meeting, City Manager Michael McLaughlin was asked to review wording of section 11-42 of the city code, which is pegged to keep commercial vehicles off city streets overnight, Sundays and holidays.

It was agreed to send a letter to Pepco and the Maryland Public Service Commission to seek a review of the energy assistance program. Councilmember Edward Putens raised the possibility of a sliding scale or considering the person’s or family’s net pay, rather than gross pay.

New Vehicles

Approved was purchase of a three-fourth ton pickup truck with snow plow for Public Works Department, at $29,134 and seven replacement police vehicles – four sedans and three SUV units needed for K-9 and traffic duties – for a total cost of $190,995 when fully equipped.

It was agreed to use the city’s federally provided Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant of $109,608 to buy 27 radios for police vehicles.

Personnel Matters

Councilmembers expressed satisfaction with and voted unanimously to approve the classification and compensation study by

Slavin Management Consultants, which called for a one percent increase for all classified employees not covered by a collective bargaining agreement, retroactive to July 1, 2008.

Two new appointments named Sandra Lange to the Advisory Planning Board and Phyllis Budin to the Senior Citizen Advisory Committee. Virginia Mudrock was appointed for a new three-year term to the Forest Preserve Advisory Board.

Accepted with regret were the resignations of Barbara Dobyns from the Arts Advisory Board and Elizabeth Kibler from the Senior Citizens Advisory Committee.

Harp Concert, Earth Day Panel

The Gildenhorn Recital Hall, Smith Center for the Performing Arts will host two programs:

On Sunday, April 19 at 8 p.m. the UM School of Music will present a free concert by the Salzedo Harp Duo. This special guest duo celebrates the life of legendary harpist and former UM faculty artist Alice Chalifoux.

On Wednesday, April 22 at 4 p.m. a free discussion on “Environmental Justice in Our Backyard” will be held. There will be a panel of activists and policy makers, moderated by Frederick Tutman, Riverkeeper of the Patuxent. As part of the Earth Day celebration, the panelists aim to dig into the plight of real people without power, money or political access and how they can find voice and means for taking action.

Theatre Renovation Design Is Complete, Raises Questions

by Carol Griffith

Difficult decisions concerning renovation plans for the Greenbelt theater await council – such as the overall conclusion of the city council worksession on the theater renovation on March 4 during which the final design was presented. Most of the issues requiring further consideration involve funding for the project and how to manage closure of the theater during work.

All members of council, City Manager Michael McLaughlin, Assistant City Manager David Moran and Director of Planning and Community Development Celia Craze took part. Also present were theater operator Paul Sanchez and two residents.

Preceding the presentation of the design by Melissa Cohen of GTM Architects, McLaughlin informed council that city staff had asked Gardiner and Gardiner, the firm currently constructing the Public Works building, to look at the completed plans and provide a preliminary estimate of costs. Their estimate is approximately $1,277,000 with the explanation that the figure contains a 25 percent contingency fund for its several exclusions and does not reflect all possible costs, such as Pepco’s fee for increasing electrical service. McLaughlin reminded council that several months ago when it was decided to proceed with the project, a preliminary cost estimate was approximately $800,000.

Councilmember Roberts reminded participants that $500,000 was available in state grant funds, and discussion ensued concerning how to make up the difference between these funds and the estimated costs. McLaughlin reminded council that there are other “big-ticket” items under consideration, such as dredging the lake and the Springhill Lake Recreation Center renovation. Other sources of the money that were discussed included increasing the Fiscal Year 2010 capital project fund and a bond referendum, although no decision about funding was reached. Craze stated that when the project reaches the bid stage, there will be a “menu” of line items council can choose to include or reject, which will determine the final cost.

McLaughlin and Craze also informed council that it had been determined by all concerned that the theater must be closed for the approximately six months estimated to complete the renovation. Because of the nature of the work involved, many systems will be nonfunctional and even to attempt to open on weekends would not be practical. Davis expressed concern that the theater would lose its customer base and that closure of the theater for such a long period would have a negative effect on the other merchants of Roosevelt Center. Councilmembers Leta Mach and Edwards Putens advocated a good marketing and public relations effort to retain customers. Although Sanchez stated that the summer brought lower attendance, there was concern that the theater would be closed for the Utopia Film Festival in October.

Cohen’s presentation broke down the plans for the renovation, stating that “the mechanical systems have outlived their usefulness.” Current conditions include not enough electrical capacity; bathrooms not up to code requirements for accessibility; the ventilation system functions poorly and must be replaced regardless of other plans for renovation; and the ticket booth is in “poor shape.” Recommendations include the installation of two new rooftop HVAC units and new electrical lines, removing the last row of seats to expand the restrooms and, in the ticket booth, adding safety glass, installing new counters and equipment to increase airflow.

Cohen emphasized that GTM had looked at original drawings and colors before presenting several esthetic issues – the need, as assessed by an acoustical engineer, to improve the acoustics of the theater, whether to retain the historic doors to the auditorium or wall coverings, possible improvements to the concession stand and whether to lay carpet or restore the terrazzo floor in the lobby. In the ensuing discussion, Roberts emphasized that the historic elements are the most important and attract patrons; Putens volunteered that modernization of esthetic elements would be perceived as a better use of city money; and Davis asked if there were any “green” features that could be incorporated into the plans. McLaughlin replied that leaving many original items in place was “green” and that staff would investigate the use of energy-efficient lighting and HVAC systems.

At the worksession’s end Davis and McLaughlin agreed that the issues of creating a timeline for the work and how to fund the project need further discussion. Craze reminded council that the city will have to receive competitive bids for a general contractor and choose one who has experience with historic work. It was agreed by all that in order to move forward, the city would continue to pre-qualify vendors and identify sources of funding and would meet again with council in three to four months.

School a Spanish-speaking counselor met with parents to increase their parenting skills and decrease child behavior problems. CARES graduate interns also worked with persons with physical limitations to help them with issues of social isolation and self-esteem.

Through GAIL, Greenbelt residents with depression issues or mental illness received on-site screening and counseling on National Depression Screening Day, the fifth time this event has been held. Information and referrals were then provided. Similar depression screening was made available at the city’s annual health fair.

Crisis Intervention

In some cases acute issues such as suicide, the death of a family member or a community crisis must be dealt with at once. At such times CARES provides Crisis Intervention counselors.

CARES also regularly offers programs for young people, such as babysitting courses, GED preparation classes and tutoring sessions in mathematics, language arts and science provided by student tutors from the University of Maryland. A tutoring camp is also offered as part of the city’s summer camp program.

Batey has arranged special services for seniors and others through outside programs as well. For example, students from the nursing program at Bowie State University offer in-home weekly health visits to home-bound Greenbelt seniors, offering such assistance as medication management, blood pressure checks and diabetic finger sticks, as well as assistance with baths.

This program also offers a health needs assessment of families of Springhill Lake Elementary School students with a similar needs assessment provided by students from the Maryland School of Social Work.

Batey also developed a partnership with the Governor’s Wellmobile to offer semi-monthly medical services and free annual school physicals for students in Springhill Lake. Through her office she made available to residents in all parts of Greenbelt the discount prescription drug program offered by the National League of Cities.

Clinical Staff

Park described her clinical staff as consisting of two part-time family counselors and three part-time crisis counselors. In addition, CARES offers internship positions to at least eight graduate students from nearby colleges and universities. Seven graduate interns worked with the family clinic this year, as well as one social work intern. Another intern dealt with crisis intervention and a social work intern worked with GAIL.

Still Park could put more interns to work, she said. She said 13 families are currently on a wait list for assistance and that the wait is usually four to six weeks. She indicated that many families are very large in size – some with as many as eight to 10 members, though the average is between five and six.

Still further assistance is offered through a subsidized brown bag food program, including fresh meat, in which some 47 families participate. They pay $19 for groceries worth about $40.

With the assistance of volunteer coordinator Ronnie Scotkin, the city continues to manage an emergency relief fund for families in crisis. Some 60 requests were received last year from families facing eviction or, more likely, dealing with rental issues. Of these, 13 families were helped to stay in their homes. Usually they receive from $200 to $400 to stabilize their situations.

In total, the projected budget, which includes income from the state as well as the county, comes to $512,100 – up from last year’s adopted budget of $481,000 and an estimated actual expenditure of $493,500. Of the requested amount, $26,100 would be the city’s 25 percent matching payment of a state grant and $404,600 would be additional monies funded 100 percent by the city.
